-Down in Desha county, Arkansas, lives an old duffer named Costello-Bob Costello. He is a well-to-do farmer, but as ignorant and arrogant as a mule. Last year he assigned to his wife—a lady somewhat in adnce of himself as to intelligence-a small plot of ground, the produce of which was to be her "very own." The result of her labors was a bale of cotton, and after it had been old and she had received the money, her

-Miss Emma Abbott's admirer, whose forty-eight verse poem we declined yesterday, called upon us last night and pleaded with such carnestness that at least the fourteenth verse and the three succeeding ones of his poem be given to-day, that we yielded a reluctant consent, and here they are:

How blessed is that thrice happy man Whose tuneful voice with Emma's soars! Who's "cast" to act her lover food, And whom—in play—she just adores! Ah! would that I could act and sing!
I'd care but little what I'd get
Per week or month could I but play
Fond Bomeo to her Juliet.

Ahf were I but the King of Song! As Emma is its radiast Queen! Oh! what a Thaddeus I'd make For such a lovable Arline! And oh! what happiness 'twould be, What rapture would my heart enthrall Were she to play Virginia To my impassioned ardent Paul!

Systematic Robbery that has Gone On for Years-A Quarter of a Million Dollars Stolen Annually.

A Determined Effort Being Made by the Trade in New York to Break Up the System.

New York Herald: The following resolu-tion was unanimously adopted yesterday at a special meeting of the board of managers of the New York cotton exchange: Resolved. That the members of the New York cotton exchange cordially indorse the action of the warehouse and delivery committee having in charge the prosecution of the cotton-thieves, and urge them to continue their efforts to break up the systematic robbery so long prevalent in this city, to which we pledge them our earnest support. The systematic robbery to which allusion is made well deserves that designation, judging from facts which have recently been brought to light. It appears that the 10b-beries alluded to amount to over two hun-dred thousand dollars a year. They are committed by cotton samplers and their laborers and employes, who are in the habit of stealing a small quantity from every bale they sample, and although the losses may be small in individual instances, in the gross they reach the figure stated above. There are about three hundred cotton samplers and assistants in this city. They are licensed by the cotton exchange and are supposed to be governed by certain rules laid down by the Mr. W. G. N. Among the many beautiful features noticeable was the finely spread table, loaded with all the delicacies of the season, and to which the guests did ample justice. The "dressing-up" of the table was extremely artistic, and although Mr. Joseph Specht, the cuisine and confectioner, on this occasion is without a peer in "gelting up" all that pertains to beauty and art in his profescases, and in some instances the cotton deal-that pertains to beauty and art in his profession, it is not too much to say yesterday he surpassed any previous effort. The center piece was a large and beautitul pyramid of nouget, surrounded by a basket of flowers made of the same material. Surrounding this piece were four large cakes. In some cases it is the former, and in others the latter, as the detectives have discovered. Here they deliver the cotton, it is weighed and they receive a strip with the weight and the amount of money they are ntitled to receive. It is needless to say that Gounod's superb opera was presented last night at Leubrie's Theater, in such an artistic manner as to receive the enthusiastic plaudits as much as the market price for it. The sam-
